and enthusiasts may say, it is very certain that in the minds of reasonable, thurking, patriotic men in both countries, there is a genuine hearty desire for peace and friendship. The worst way to settle a greviance between two countries is to go to war. That last, sublime, terrible alternative can only be accepted when reason and common because leave no other resource. We have always regarded the suggestion of war with England as an unspeakable calamity, that sin in politics which is only equaled by that sin in the New Testament which knows no forgiveness. Of course there had been defined as a subject to the sentence of lives to amuse anything more formidable than a few days many trials, that one hardly expects the many tria knows no forgiveness. Of course there may be causes for a just war; and the time known. There is the disputed question of the right of England to recognize belligreency. English writers contend that the recognition of belligreency is peouliarly a domestic right, the excross of which cannot be questioned by any foreign power. Whether England or America makes any concessions on this point we do not know. At the same time, it strikes us as a political sentiment which need not have any practical effect upon the negotiations. If that point should be conceded by England, the real question is undisturbed. Let England make all possible concessions as to her error in this recognition, and we have yet to enter upon the real question of the "Alabama claims."

What will rejoice every citizen is the disposition to peace shown by both countries. The Administration has won a victor of the probably the wild out the first almost without moral accountability—faces wide at the checkplic carried to compain the case of curres would cost animal content. The announcement that the governments of England and America have at last come to a basis of discussion in the Alabama question, leads to the hope that there will come in the end a basis of compromise and treaty. But it must be the last arbitrament. But it must be the last arbitrament. All other remedies and compromises must be exhausted.

It is to the glory of Mr. Fish that in our dealings with England he has always looked to peace, while, at the same time, yielding no jot nor title of the national honer. His first dispatch to Mr. Motley was clear, precise and unmistakable, and met the approval of the country. The principles announced in that dispatch have controlled our diplomacy, and they find full fruition in the willingness to treat upon the basis announced yesterday to the English Parliament by the Queen and to Congress by the l'resident.

Not less interesting was the study of the snowflakes themselves, each separate one a curione crystal. Sometimes the feathery creatures came down, lightly floating, with prisms, cubes, rhomboids and hexagons, ourseting and caracolling in fraternal friendship; or, gathering moisture, the fairy crystals descended in fairy points; of the snow-bound earth. FAST DRIVING .- The indurated and unusually level condition of our streets for the past few weeks has stimulated the reprehensible practice of fast driving to an extent altogether too dangerous for pedestrians. Everyone enjoys a drive on a level road, and behind fleet and handsome horses, but the crowded streets is not the place for such equestrian fexhibitions; the driving park or plank road are more appropriate for the purpose. On Saturday afternoon, while two gentlemen were in the act of crossing Washington street to the Second National Bank, hostler belonging to some livery stable came driving down Spring street at a 2:40 gait. Upon reaching the corner of Washington he suddenly wheeled up that street, and had the aforesaid gentlemen not been possessed of unusual activity they would certainly have been knocked down, and probably seriously injured or killed. As it happened, the rim or tire of the fore wheel just grared the person of
